CHANNEL ISLANDS RESERVE LAWSUIT UPDATE

Today, March 26, 2003, the court ruled to deny the application for a temporary restraining order to halt enforcement of the Channel Islands Reserves, while the matter awaits a full trial. Today's decision is unlikely to have any effect on the outcome of the case, but it does mean that enforcement of the reserves will most likely commence as scheduled on April 9th. A date had not as yet been set for trial, at the time this Chum Line is going to press. ## Prez Paul Varenchik Reports

The Awards Banquet was a very enjoyable evening for all. The professionalism demonstrated by the Braemar Country Club made the evening go off without a hitch. The meal was a little small to my liking, but very tasty. We had approximately 90 attendees. Outgoing President, Al Scow, presented a special Recognition Award to those with memberships of 30 years or more and club service, or those over 80 years old and still active in club matters. These members were presented with club jackets. Al paid for these out of his own deep pocket...Thanks Al.

The magician kept the evening crowd entertained while we narrowed the presentation time-frame down a bit to allow for the very successful auction which was reported on in the last ChumLine. ■

Psychology of an Unscheduled Release

by Richard Lapidus

We've all seen it many times. This guy hooks up. The fish goes ripping out, and the guy scoots up the rails and disappears on the other side of the boat. In the meantime, you catch a fish, go get a beer, eat a sandwich, take a nap, and when you come back up on deck the same guy is hooked up again.

You say to him, "You hooked up again?" He's too tired to speak so the deckhand says, "No, it's the same fish." Then you notice the sweat dripping from his face and the deep bend in his rod.

Somebody says, "He's on a big fish!" You ask, "What pound line is he using?" And you try to imagine what kind of fish this guy is fighting in that part of the ocean.

The captain is down on the deck and barks instructions like, "keep a bend in that rod," and "nice and steady", and "try and get a few turns."

Most of us have been in a situation where we've been on a big fish that took a long time to land or lose. But what goes through your head when you're on a monster of the deep for a very long time? How do you console yourself if you should lose? Of these last two questions, I can only answer one.

Max Wunderman, Ivor

Hodis, Michael Lapidus and I were fishing on the Bongos II out of Newport Beach at Catalina Island a few days ago. The morning bite was slow. Ivor had landed a nice legal halibut and Mike caught a short white seabass off the bottom. Around 11:00 the calico bass really turned on. It got to where they were attacking the Wham at about every cast. Sure, there were lots of shorts, but we had no trouble getting legal size fish either. By 1:15 I was the last man standing. The captain and deckhand were fishing a little, I decided to put on a white seabass jig with two dead squid and bounce it off the bottom for a few minutes before giving up for the day. I recalled several times when the croakers breezed through in the early afternoon, and Mike had caught a short one earlier.

First drop I got hit instantly, but it was only a whitefish, and we had to let it go. Right color, wrong species. On the second drop I felt some tapping. I let it continue for a few seconds and then set the hook. It felt like I caught the bottom, but line started going out steadily. It went out, but not screaming. The captain said, "That's the right kind" and he instructed me to follow the fish to the bow. That's not easy to do on the Bongos, as you have to walk up hill on a narrow ledge. I had no choice but to hand my rod to the deckhand and hold on to the handrail, and virtually crawl up to the bow. (If this ever happens to you, I suggest that you don't look down, but focus on getting to the bow).

I took the rod back from the deckhand and the fish steadily pulled out to sea. I stood there bracing myself and holding the rod as I watched the line steadily going out. There was a major bend in the Calstar 700L graphite rod. "What pound line are you using?" someone said. "Twenty-five," I said, but I wished I had much, much heavier. At the time I dropped it, it seemed pretty heavy after using eight- and ten-pound line for the calicos all day.

At least my Pro-gear 251 reel had been recently tuned up and I had a full spool of line. Fifteen minutes later I was still in the bow and my legs began to feel the strain. I could occasionally get a few turns on him, but mainly the fish took some short runs, stopped and took off again. "He doesn't know he's hooked yet," the deckhand said. "Really," I asked. "Then do me a favor and don't tell him." At a half hour into the fight the captain said, "We're going to have to chase him." The engines started, we slowly followed the fish while I reeled in like crazy.

The captain suggested it was 70-lb. class white seabass. Then the speculation turned to a black seabass. The captain turned the boat and I made my way back to the stern which was a lot more comfortable. All of a sudden the fish must have figured out that he was hooked, and took off with a powerful run. Everyone gave advice. "Nice and steady", "keep a bend in the rod", "try to get a few turns", "don't let him get into the kelp". He did! By putting the reel into free spool, I got him out but then he went back in.

If I could only get this fish up I would promise to become a better person!

An hour had gone by, I was beginning to admire my adversary and I was getting exhausted. I had never fought a fish this long and this hard. I thought, if I can only see a shadow or deep color or anything, just to see what I'm hooked onto. I looked down and about 90% of my line was in. I was still getting a few turns but the fish was stopped with the parking brakes set.

Suddenly, without warning, the line snapped. I breathed deeply and handed the rod to the deckhand and went about the business of trying to get the tension out of my body. I was reassured that I had done everything right. Captain Chandler and the deckhand Sonny were nothing short of spectacular.

It had been a real experience going from one and two pound calico bass to Jaws. That day the fish won. When you lose a big fish like that you have to tell yourself that the fish must win sometimes. And it is the truth! I wondered if that fish had any comprehension of what it had accomplished, If it did, he would have a good story to tell his friends. Maybe each time he told it I would get bigger and stronger.

I tried to look at the bright side of the situation. I had fun for an hour of my life that I'll never forget and now I don't have to be a better person. Finally, if you check the trophy contender listings in the Chum Line you'll notice that I turned in a weight slip for a two pound, three ounce calico bass. That's the final psychology. After this kind of battle you have a need to turn in something. ■

Now Hear This

SaltWater Sportsman recently (3/03) ran an editorial from which this excerpt is taken. The Numbers are staggering and surprising.

The cost of fish to the consumer is far more than just what's on the price tag. It includes the enormous cost to the taxpayer for subsidizing the vast fisheries bureaucracy required to sustain the level of catches. According to NMFS, in 2002, U.S., commercial landings totaled 9.5 billions pounds of fish. The recreational catch (landings plus dead discards) was estimated at 262.4 million pounds. Each is figured to contribute somewhere around $28 billion to the economy. In other words, commercial fishing produces $2.95 per pound of fish while the recreational sector produces $106.71 per pounds of fish, while taking a substantially smaller toll on the resource. ■

FAMILY PICNIC

LARRC will be holding a family picnic on Sunday, July 27 at Lake Sherwood.

Planning of the event is just beginning but it sounds like a fun day that will feature a potluck BBQ, fishing, boat rides, etc. Keep an eye out for details.

BILL ALPERT "KING OF THE CALICOS TOURNNEY"

Bob Selvin has agreed to be the tournament chairman for 2003. The date and boat have yet to be set.

MERCHANDISE

Francine Varenchik has taken over merchandise duties. She has large supply of hats in stock with the new tuna logo. They come in two styles, standard and low profile, and cost is $10 ea. Jackets can be ordered if anyone is interested.

AWARDS BANQUET 2004

The board had a discussion about the option of having an Brunch instead of a Dinner Banquet in 2004. If you have an opinion please contact Paul Varenchik or Brad Stich.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Mike Godfrey is still in search of a volunteer(s) to take over his dinner meeting duties. If you are interest in getting involved, please contact Mike.

Cohen!

An elderly couple was on a cruise and it was really stormy. They were standing on the back of the boat watching the moon, when a wave came up and washed the old woman overboard. They searched for days and couldn't find her, so the captain sent the old man back to shore with the promise that he would notify him as soon as they found something.

Three weeks went by and finally the old man got a fax from the boat. It read: "Sir, sorry to inform you, we found your wife dead at the bottom of the ocean. We hauled her up to the deck and attached to her butt was an oyster and in it was a pearl worth $50,000. Please advise"

GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

A wealthy lady from California, who was a tree hugger and a vociferous anti-hunter, purchased a piece of timberland in Oregon. There was a large tree on one of highest points in the tract. Because she wanted to get a good view of her land, she started to climb the big tree. As she neared the top, she encountered a spotted owl that attacked her. In her haste to escape, the lady slid down the tree to the ground and got many splinters in her private parts.

In considerable pain, she hurried to the nearest country doctor. Being a hunter himself, the doctor listened to her story with great patience, and then told her to go into the examining room and he would see if he could help her.

She sat and waited for three hours before the doctor reappeared. The angry lady demanded, "What took you so long?" He smiled and told, "Well, I had to get permits from the Environmental Protection Agency, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Land Management before I could remove old-growth timber from a recreational area. I'm sorry but they all turned me down."

FOUNDATION REQUEST by Larry Brown

I recently bought a new car and was faced with the question of what to do with my old one. The dealer insulted me with a low trade-in value. I drove by a couple of car lots only to be further disappointed with even lower figures, and my wife and I certainly did not want the hassles of advertising, DMV paperwork, smog check and receiving strangers at our door. I told the last dealer I'd rather give it away, and believe it or not he gave me a card and said, "why don't you call these folks and donate it."

Cars 4 Causes<sup>SM</sup>

The Charity that gives to Charities

1-800-766-CARE

I called Aish HaTorah, a Jewish charity, who picked up the car, sent me a professional appraisal for valuation, did all the DMV paperwork and got a great tax deduction. This was my experience, you obviously will need to speak to your tax consultant and consider your individual tax bracket to see what's best for you. Not only did I get a great deduction, giving the car to a good charity made me feel good.

Thanks to some initial investigate work by Royal MacNair, you can now donate your used car, boat or motor home to LARRC through Cars 4 Causes. They will pick up your vehicle, regardless of condition, tow it for free, do any repairs, handle the smog certification and DMV paperwork, sell it and send the LARRC Foundation the money. You feel good, help the Foundation to take local needy kids fishing and get a nice tax deduction, which may be close to or even better than some of your other alternatives of disposal.

Please call Cars 4 Causes at 800 766-2273 and tell them you want to donate your car, boat or motor home to the Los Angeles Rod & Reel Foundation and they'll do the rest.

Thank you for your generosity. —Larry ■

CHILEAN SEABASS UNDER FIRE

The Patagonian toothfish, known in the United States as Chilean seabass, is harvested in the Southern Ocean near Antarctica by an international commercial fishing fleet. The fish has become a favorite in American restaurants. It is very susceptible to overfishing since sexual maturity is reached in six to nine years. Illegal "pirate boats" are targeting the remaining fish and docking at "rogue" ports. This year federal agents have seized more than 60 tons of Chilean Seabass shipped illegally to the northeastern United States.

CATCHES TO NOTE

•The IGFA reports that John Jay Hill, of Lakewood, CA caught 16-lb. tippet record California Halibut. It was an 11-pounder caught on a Clouser Minnow.

•Two 11-year-old boys caught a 162-lb halibut off a dock at Ketchikan, Alaska. The duo fought the fish for two hours with a 40-lb leader and six-oz. sinker rigged on 30-lb line. Gregory Johnson and Zachary Hamilton shared the work and several local charter captains helped.
