Good Sportsmanship is Worth More Than all the Fish in the Ocean JANUARY 2017

LARRC DINNER MEETING SPEAKER

PRO GEAR

The January dinner meeting speakers will be rod and reel maker Pro Gear. Yihsu (Eshe) Kao, Danny Jimenez, and Oliver Solis will speak to the history of the company and detail their products known to be solid, simple and proven.

Come to the dinner meeting and learn how in the beginning conventional reel makers laughed at the idea of a one-piece aluminum frame. With insight, determination, and entrepreneurial drive, Eshe developed and manufactured the first ever one-piece aluminum frame. And as they say, the rest is history. PRESIDENT'S CORNER

By Donald Goldsobel
Donald@dgoldsoebel.com

THE BANQUET IS COMING. FEBRUARY 26 AT BRAEMAR COUNTRY CLUB. HAVE YOU SENT IN YOUR RESPONSE? I HOPE IT SAYS YES. GOOD FELLOWSHIP, FOOD AND GREAT AUCTION ITEMS. We look forward to gathering together and seeing friends we have not seen in a while.

As I head into the end of my first year in office, I begin to appreciate more than ever the assistance I have received from the Board of Directors, Past Presidents and stalwarts such as Steve Simon and Dave Levinson. Thank you all.

Congratulations to John Ballotti. After serving three terms as LARRC president and a current member of our Board of Directors, he took on leadership of the local CCA CAL chapter and now he has been appointed to a 4 year term on the 20 member Marine Protected Areas Federal Advisory Committee (MPA FAC). We are proud to have John represent the interests of sport fishing and the health of the oceans' fisheries.

Look for an update of the on-line Yearbook which will contain a complete calendar of events that are currently scheduled. Look for a new Family Picnic date.

The Kids Trip planning committee will soon be forming. If you want to get involved, this is the Club/Foundation primo event. We will be seeking volunteers. Do something really significant to make this event happen. Call me 818-970-4578.

MEMBERSHIP NEWS

The following individuals have applied for Active membership:

- Phil Solomon a Dentist from Long Beach
- Alex Chen a General Contractor from Chino Hills
- Robert Quiroz an Engineer with Virgin Galactic from Redondo Beach

The Board of Directors is pleased to welcome returning member Sol Zide who was approved for membership at the November board meeting.

PREVIEW OF SELECT FOUNDATION AUCTION ITEMS

The Foundation Raffle at the annual Club banquet is always a treat. Soon you will receive a mailing with the raffle tickets and a complete listing of all seven raffle prizes. This is a preview of coming attractions.

Shimano Talica 10 II Reel with Terez Rod

This is a perfect combination for Southern California fishing, bigger fish department. The two speed reel is small in size but sturdy enough to handle the big bluefin should they stick around another year. Powerful reel for yellowtail and big white sea bass, with the added attraction of being able to shift into low gear when necessary. The matching Terez rod is light and a joy to handle all day at the rail. Fill the reel with 50# or 65# spectra, topshots of 30# to 80# fluoro.

Terez rods are the first ever fishing rods built to fish PowerPro. Using TC4 technology, Shimano created the lightest and most powerful rod ever built, with EVA grips and custom Aluminum Reel Seats matched with the new Fuji K Guide with Alconite Rings.

SHIMANO TRINIDAD 20A with 8 foot TERAMAR ROD

This is a perfect combination for throwing iron at yellowtail. Or chasing white sea bass. Or any type of off shore fishing. Put 30# or 40# mono on the reel for casting. Or, if you like to cast with Spectra, 30# to 50# spectra, leaving enough room for your preferred mono topshot.. Teramar rods are built with high quality materials in the style of west coast rods, shutting off to allow more lifting and pulling power, for West Coast techniques.

Shimano says: Teramar Inshore rods feature top-of-the-line Fuji components and TC4 Construction material. For West Coast anglers, Teramar Series has a rod for the specific techniques of your home waters.

Shimano Stradic C14+ Spinning reels

For all fans of great spinning reels, the Shimano Stradic C14+ is a highly regarded reel with a line capacity of 140 yards of 8 pound mono. The fast rate of retrieve brings in 35 inches per turn of the handle. Matched with an 8'6" two-piece Shimano IM6 graphite rod, this is the spinning rod to have for local fishing.

Curado 300EJ low profile baitcasting combination

The Curado 300 EJ is a low profile bass reel with a capacity of 200 yards of 50 pound spectra. If you are a monofilament fan, you can pack on 240 yards of 12 pound mono. The reel has six ball bearings and high-efficiency gearing. The Dartanian drags will withstand the strongest fish runs, after which the power handle makes for a smooth retrieval. The super stopper and variable brake system assist in the technicalities of fishing. Pair this with a Seeker Blue Lightning CSW808 trigger stick rod custom wrapped by club member Robby Cohn and you are inshore fishing in style for calicos or yellowtail with top of the line equipment.

Easily viewable with a large 9.7 inch display. The thinnest iPad ever, loaded with advanced technologies, including an 8 megapixel camera. 32 GB storage. Color: gold.

BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE TO COME!!!

But you will have to wait for the next issue of the Chumline, or the raffle tickets to arrive in the mail. Sweet dreams.

ENVIRONMENTAL MATTERS

Submitted by Eric Rogger

◆ PACIFIC BLUEFIN: Pacific Coast Sportfishing recently reported that a petition had been received by NMFS (National Marine Fisheries Service) asking that the bluefin be listed as an endangered species. Current limits per day are two fish! The ESA Endangered Species Listing would mean no bluefin catch would be allowed off our shores.

This move was opposed by a number of our well known recreational organizations including CSA, ASA, Coastside etc. The questions raised would make a marine biologist stumble! From the various sources I consulted we can come up with this simplification.. The BFT caught on the west coast represent but a small part of the overall catch. Mainly they seem to be targeted in the western Pacific and in particular the Sea of Japan. Most of the fish have not had a chance to spawn and their spawning biomass has been greatly reduced.

My not unsupported guess as to the solution revolves around better international management of these fish. This will take better efforts on the part of national management and pressure put on the Western and Central Pacific Commissions as well as the IATTC (Inter American Tropical Tuna Commission). Good Luck! My support is for those organizations that interact with these bodies. The NMFS will hopefully rely on all scientific information available before making a decision.

◆ MEXICAN MARINE RESERVE: Mid September saw several news announcements regarding a major biosphere region. The creation of a coastal reserve was made public after a UN Biodiversity Conference which Mexico hosted at Cancun. It encompasses 2.7 million acres and includes 21 islands and 97 inlets. It includes the Coronados near San Diego. The Revilla Gígedos, at the tip of Baja already have their separate reserve. Details of how this will impact fishing along this area have not yet been announced...Stay tuned!

◆ NOAA REPORTS ON SEAFOOD CONSUMPTION: Figures for 2015 show that Americans increased their per capita use of seafood in 2015 by 1 pound to 15.5 lbs. Startingly about 90% of US Seafood is imported although some of this includes domestic catches that are processed elsewhere and then shipped to the US. US consumes $96 Billion on fishery products in 2015 this includes $64.8 billion spent in restaurants. These are NOAA estimates!

Comments or contributions would be welcome:

John Ballotti Appointed to the Marine Protected Areas Federal Advisory Committee

The Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere has appointed John Ballotti to a 4 year term on the 20 member Marine Protected Areas Federal Advisory Committee (MPA FAC) to represent the interests and perspectives of recreational anglers. John is a member of the Coastal Conservation Association (CCA) California Board of Directors and Executive Committee, president of the Los Angeles chapter of CCA California, and a member of the board of directors of the Los Angeles Rod and Reel Club. He was a member of the South Coast Regional Stakeholder Group during the California Marine Life Protection Act (MLPA) implementation process.

John received strong support and endorsement from the American Sportfishing Association (ASA), Coastal Conservation Association National, Coastal Conservation Association California, and the Coastside Fishing Club.

MPA FAC advises NOAA (Commerce) and the Department of Interior on ways to strengthen the nation's system of Marine Protected Areas (MPAs). It includes representatives of diverse stakeholder groups, including scientists, academia, commercial fishermen, recreational anglers, divers, state and tribal resource managers, the energy and tourism industries, and environmentalists. John is one of only two in the United States from the recreational community appointed to this committee for the coming term.

PUERTO VALLARTA SUCCESS!

By Chas Schoemaker

A smooth and uneventful flight transported us from LAX to the idyllic world of Puerto Vallarta. A short cab ride later and the six of us were sipping cool beverages at the marina restaurant as we waited for the Success to restock the boat for our trip. The general consensus was life that was good and the fishing part of the trip had not yet even started.

The limited load of six on the charter arranged by Larry Brown for a boat which takes 12 on it overnight trips from San Diego ensured that there was plenty of bunk space, as well as storage areas for luggage. We were traveling light since the Success boat provides fishing gear. Boat equipment was an 80 pound outfit and 130 pound outfit for each angler, an Avet 30 and an Avet 50 with Seeker rail rods. The targeted species was big yellow fin tuna.

An overnight run brought us to El Banco by the Tres Marias Islands. Fishing started in the dark at 3 am making squid. After enough were boated, the catching part of the trip took off on a gallop, with five fish up to 170 pounds by daylight for the boat. For me, a big tuna in the dark on a PL68 was a great way to start the trip.

A delicious breakfast, the first of a series of delicious meals, fortified us for the rest of the morning. The tuna decided to rest after sunrise, not yielding to the temptation of lively caballitos or fresh large squid. Nate practiced his form on a dorado and a sailfish, and a couple school size tuna were added to the larder. Two more excellent meals and then it was nap time, until the process started all over again at 3 am the next morning.

Repeating the drill, after making squid, the sinker rigs and heavy jigs were deployed. Using a glow-in-the-dark JRI – 8 Cow Killer jig, Larry Brown brought a tuna to the decks that taped out at 228 pounds. After another gorgeous sunrise and another great breakfast, we were back at the rail, where Art landed a 100 pound class tuna.

Massive amounts of tuna, as wide as the sonar band and 10 fathoms in depth, were metered, but they had lockjaw. Balloons, kite rigs, sinker rigs, fly lined caballito, fly lined squid, a heavy jig, everything we had was out there, but no takers. We moved to meet a big bird school coming towards the boat, metering more tonnage of fish, but again no biters. We plunked away, waiting for conditions to improve, or chased bird schools.

The beauty of a trip with four days of fishing is that it allows enough time for favorable conditions to develop. Our final morning book ended our first day, this time with six fish on the boat by sunrise. My estimated 150 pounder came on the JRI-8. It was a good jig, getting bumped then inhaled on the drop by another fish, which eventually chewed through the line. The plunker bite of big tuna on the kite or balloon lasted throughout our final day. For me the trip ended with a bang, with another big fish on the balloon at sunset. Two Trips to Guadalupe on the Royal Polaris

By Mark Peranich

This past fall I was fortunate enough to fish two long range fishing trips. Both trips were on the Royal Polaris and both trips were limited loads. The first trip was a 10 day in the middle of October. When you fish a 10 day in October you expect to fish the “Ridge” and the “Alejos Rocks”, stopping at Cedros Island on the way home. That is not how this trip went. When we left Point Loma we headed directly to Ensenada where we checked into Mexican customs. From there we headed 16 hours south to fish yellowtail near Canoas. Fishing there was a little slow and there was not much sign of life so we continued south to the “Alejos Rocks”.

When we arrived around 11:00am the American Angler was still there so we headed west to the “Alejos Banks” where we found the Wahoo ready and willing to play. The plan was to troll Mauraders, stop on jig strikes, then throw bombs, jigs and live bait. The best pattern for Mauraders was tony the tiger, black/orange and black/purple. The best bomb, hands down were Captain Jimmy Bombs in green. Jigs and live bait worked fair at best. We fished for a day and a half and everyone had plenty of opportunities to catch fish. I personally caught one wahoo on the first 1/2 day and three wahoo on the second day, all coming on Captain Jimmy Bombs rigged with 130# flouro. The only things that slowed the wahoo bite were stripped marlin and sharks. Both were unwelcomed and annoying. That evening we departed the “Rocks” and headed northwest to Guadalupe Island. We arrived approximately 30 hours later in the middle of the night, slept a few short hours on anchor and started fishing at sunrise.

This was my first trip to Guadalupe Island and truly different from anywhere that I’ve ever fished before. It’s a volcanic island out in the middle of the ocean with few beaches and straight up and down rock formations. You will sometimes fish within 50 yards from the shore, in less than 200 ft. of water and catch tuna in the 75lb to 125lb class.

On both of my trips all tuna were caught on fly lined sardines. Depending on the day we fished flouro top shots of 60, 80 and 100lb test line worked best with 2/0 – 4/0 circle hooks. When the fish got finicky we dropped down to 2/0 Gamagatsu J hooks. The down side to small hooks were that they easily pulled from the fish. When you were able to get your bait through the seals and lucky enough to get bit you had to get them through the sharks that were always lurking under the boat. When there were 2 – 4 fish on at a time your odds were significantly better to land your fish. On my first trip I went 2 for 4 and on the second trip, I did a bit better, landing 4 of 6.

The yellowtail fishing was much better on the first trip than the second one. There were a few yellows taken on yoyo jigs with 50/60 lb. test flouro but most were caught on the dropper loop. We used 100lb test mono or flouro, 24 oz to 28 oz lead and 8/0 – 10/0 circle hooks. I brought a 765 H Grafighter with an Avet EX 30 and was gravely mistaken. I went 0 for 3 on yellowtail, “rocked” every time. The reel was good but the rod was too soft. You have just a few moments to get them off the bottom or it’s over.

My second trip was a 6 day trip and went first to Ensenada and then directly to Guadalupe. This trip was similar to the first trip except that the weather was much colder. Rather than fishing in shorts and t shirts we fished in down vests, jackets and hoodies. The kite was much more effective on this trip as well. All in all, both were great trips and I have already booked a Guadalupe Island trip for next year aboard the Royal Polaris. Fishing the RP with 20 guys is really special.

There is one last thing to mention about Guadalupe Island and that is about the Great White sharks. I have many pictures of the sharks and of the damage that they can do to a 125lb tuna but we all promised to keep pictures off social media. I would suggest to everyone to get out to Guadalupe and see these magnificent animals. Watching them on National Geographic doesn't do them justice. These animals are 15 to 20 feet long and weigh thousands of pounds. They will cruise effortlessly off the side of the boat and tilt to one side as to look at everyone of us as he goes by. When they eat the fish that you have been fighting for the last hour they do it with no drama. They simply swim up to your fish, open their mouth and close it. There is no head shaking. Everything except the head is gone and sometimes they take the entire fish. A once in a life time "must see".

LARRC PACIFIC DAWN ROCK FISHING TRIP, CHANNEL ISLANDS

The “Fishing Ekdahl’s” Carl, Kris and myself joined Charter Master Reza Malekzadeh and other club members on the October 21st, 2016 Pacific Dawn trip to the Channel Islands out of Ventura Harbor. We left on Thursday the 20th and fished on Friday the 21st. I really like this format as it gives you the rest of the weekend to prepare and package your fish and then enjoy cooking some with the family. My family arrived on Wednesday and I took off a little early on Thursday so we could hit the road from Glendora to Ventura before traffic really became bad.

We made good time and got there early enough to get checked in and have a very nice dinner at the Rhumb Line restaurant right there at the landing. Great food, drink and service put us in a festive mood and we were ready to get on board the Pacific Dawn. I really like the way Reza runs the show by sending out the bunk assignments in advance so we all know where to stow our gear with no stress. The Pacific Dawn has added more shelving on deck for tackle boxes and that is very convenient. Captain Pat Cavanaugh runs a smooth operation and he and his crew are fun to be with. It was great to see Fernando and Man Dog Mike again. We got settled, rigged up for the next morning, had some wine that Kris brought and hit the hay. Sleep came soon as we had good weather and the boat made its way up the channel smoothly.

Friday morning we woke up to the smell of coffee and the beginnings of breakfast. I so love the morning of a fishing trip; getting the boots and sunscreen on, choosing the beanie or the cap depending on how cold or windy it might be and snapping on the fishing belt with plier and hand towel. Not unlike knights of old donning their armor in preparation for battle... OK, great image but it is only rock fishing after all... Little did I know about the toothy monsters we would encounter later that afternoon...

After some coffee, the break of daylight and some thoughtful boat maneuvering by Pat we were over our first spot and Pat said “let them go!” we were fishing! It was not long before some quality Vermillion Reds started to come over the side and thunk down on the deck. Man Dog Mike was as usual very attentive to my Dad to make sure he was doing alright, I appreciate that! And so it went for about 3 or 4 hours and we all had our limits of Rock Fish and it was time to go look for Ling Cod.

Pat and Fernando instructed us to switch out the two hook rigs and go with a straight dropper loop and use bait fish instead of squid for the Lings. This formula worked very well as we bounced our 8 oz. torpedoes in relatively shallow water for the “Dragons of the Deep.” There were some fierce battles played out on deck, these suckers were big, nasty, mean hard fighting fish. I got a big kick out of watching both Kris and Dad fight and land quality Ling Cod and I managed to catch my limit of three too.

Finally it was time to head back to the landing and we enjoyed a very good lunch of extremely fresh blackened rockfish prepared by the cook on the way home, he did a great job with the food all trip. I very much enjoyed fishing with my family, fellow LARRC members and Pat’s crew; it is always a dependably great time and we have signed up for the October 2017 trip!

CALLING ALL COOKS

Lee Harris found this neat variation on poke that takes it in the direction of healthy nachos. Try it and tell us about how you made it your own.

Tex-Mex Poke (10 -15 appetizers)

2 lbs tuna, small cubes (keep your tuna cubes cold in the refrigerator while making the poke sauce)

1 bag fried Mexican corn chips

¼ cup Mexican Crema, or sour cream

3 tablespoons soy sauce

2 chipotle peppers in adobo sauce, finely chopped

4 stalks of green onions

1 bundle of cilantro

Coarse black pepper

ground cayenne pepper (mild chill powder is always optional!)

small pac of white sesame seeds

1. To make the poke, add the Mexican crema, soy sauce and chipotle in a medium sized bowl and mix. Now add the fish, and mix again.

2. Place 3 or 4 chips on a plate and top with dollop of poke. Sprinkle on green onions, cilantro, black pepper, sesame seeds and cayenne pepper. Now eat!

Nick Ekdahl suggests...

This is the fish taco/fish fry we had the following Sunday after the trip.

The recipe:

It is best to fry the fish outdoors if possible. I use the wok burner on my outdoor BBQ to heat the oil. Use caution when working with hot oil.

Trim Ling Cod fillets, cut in to small taco size pieces. To coat 4 lbs. Ling Cod pieces, use 1 box Beer Batter Mix, 1 box Tempura Mix and two bottles of ice cold beer, preferably craft beer.

Heat vegetable oil to 375 Degrees F, use a candy thermometer to maintain 375; adjust burner as necessary.

Carefully add fish, several pieces at a time, to hot oil. Fry 3 to 5 minutes, turning once to brown evenly, until fish is golden brown and flakes easily with a fork. Drain on paper towels.

Heat corn or flour tortillas on grill or griddle to your liking. Add fish, Pico de Gallo, angle hair shredded cabbage, crema, guacamole and hot sauce of your choosing.

This recipe will make enough fish tacos to feed 6 to 8 people well, adjust as need to fit the size of your party. Enjoy!
