The 15th Annual LARRC Family Picnic

The 15th Annual LARRC Family Picnic took place by the shore of Lake Sherwood on Sunday, June 25th, thanks to the hospitality and sponsorship of Claire and Jerry Weissman. Approximately 80 people attended. As usual, Calabasas Custom Catering – led by Paul Varenchik – provided delicious food including tri tip, ribs, chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs, fruit salad, Caesar salad, chips, guacamole, cakes, and ice cream. The weather was warm but there was abundant shade under the many pop up tens that were set up. Steve Simon brought loads of fishing rods and equipment for all the kids. William Davis provided lots of bait. Everyone had a good time, whether kicking back or fishing. The blue gills were very cooperative and some bass as well. Special thanks go to Steve Simon, Andy MacDonald, Mark Manculich, Richard Stone, Rob Baldwin, Paul Varenchik, and Michael Godfrey for helping with the food, set up, and clean up. Allen Brodetsky arranged for the tricky insurance for event. We would like to have the same event next year and add some games for the kids and adults.

The Good, The Better, and Best

By John Ballotti

The drive to Mammoth Lakes was 90 minutes of horrible traffic on the 405 followed by 4 hours of smooth sailing on the 14 and 395. Arriving late afternoon the temperature was a perfect 75 degrees with a cool breeze coming off the snow-covered mountains. A good start to a three-day adventure. With the runoff going full tilt, lake fishing was the only option. Fishing with Sierra Drifters Guide Service Crowley Lake was the destination on day one. Sometimes things don't work out as planned. The bite at Crowley was non-existent. Nothing, nada, not even a take for three hours. My guide, Doug Rodricks, said enough is enough. It is always good when the guide has a plan B. We left the lake and went to a private pond fed by McGee Creek known as Jurassic Pond. It did not disappoint with browns and rainbows over 5 pounds caught on a 5 weight fly rod. After catching a few of the biggest trout I have ever seen, I called it a day.

The next day I free-lanced fishing a few of the higher elevation lakes. Rock Creek Lake, Convict Lake, and Lake Mary all provided stunning scenery and a few small trout. The final day saw me back on Crowley with guide Doug Dolan. As bad as Crowley was on the first day, it was that good this time. Fishing with a 17-foot leader in 19 feet of water using a two-midge rig with four-pound test, over 20 large trout were brought to net and released. The first fish of the day was a Sacramento perch, followed by a 22-inch cutthroat, followed by a 19 inch brown, followed by a 20 inch rainbow. I managed to get the Crowley grand slam on my first four fish and it only got better after that. The indicator kept going down and I kept swinging all day long. This was the best day of trout catching I have ever experienced.

If you are heading to the Sierras do yourself a favor and give Sierra Drifters a call. You will not be disappointed. Not only are they excellent guides and fun to spend time with, they also always have a plan B.

Royal Star 7 Day Yields Big Yellows at Guadalupe Island

By Fisherman Phil

LARRC anglers Phil Bell, Richard Stone, Larry Brown and Phil's friend Bill Butcher enjoyed trophy yellowtail fishing at Guadalupe Island aboard Larry's annual 7-Day charter on the Royal Star.

A beautiful rock off Guadalupe Island with the Spirit of Adventure fishing vessel

To fish Guadalupe, the boat needs a special permit and requires stops in Ensenada on the way out and the way back to complete customs and immigration procedures. It is all very fast and simple and the diversion only costs a few hours of fishing time for the privilege of fishing the "big island." Guadalupe is a beautiful island with stunning rock formations where you can picture all of the volcanic and seismic activity of the island's violent creation. The fishing for yellowfin tuna and yellowtail can be world class but during our short visit the conditions were very tough. One day we fished in 40-knot winds and the fishing was very slow, but the yellowtail we caught were all beautiful, trophy quality fish.

Larry and Bill both caught 43 lb yellows, Larry's on a JRI jig; Bill's on a flylined sardine. Larry caught all of his big yellows on the JRI jig. Fisherman Phil's biggest yellow was a 39 lb. beast caught on a dropper loop set up using a sardine. He also caught a personal best Calico and Sheepshead, both released. Richard Stone also caught several giant jacks in the high 30's.

Only 3 yellowfin tuna were caught weighing 109 lbs- the jackpot fish, a 47 lb yellowfin tuna on bait, and a small 20 lb. yellowfin tuna on the troll.

Larry raised $1,650 on the raffle to support LARRC and MDRA Veterans and kids trips and is sending LARRC $1,000 from these proceeds to contribute to Veterans fishing. The fisherman enjoyed selecting the fishing products brought onboard by Larry and Dave Berutich, co-chartermasters, who each had an outstanding free raffle in addition to Larry's $10 per ticket charity raffle for his veterans and kids fishing programs he supports. Larry has 30 sponsors and all anglers get at least 5 nice raffle items for FREE and then he does the mega, buy-in raffle, where the prizes included reels from Avet, Penn and Daiwa, rods by Phenix, jackets by both Avet and Phenix, original signed artwork by Chuck Byron, a Body Glove wetsuit from Dive 'N Surf in Redondo, an Aftco fighting belt, a large Avet reel bag and a professional travel duffle by Steve Abel Quality Gear.

Captain Brian Sims and his crew were very skilled and helpful. Chef Nestor and his assistant Alex delighted us with some wonderful meals, including a delicious prime rib dinner on the last night.

FISHING ALASKA . . . (a FISH REPORT, etc)

Late June saw long time LARRC members Dave Levinson and Eric Rogger on an Alaska Airlines flight to Sitka. We had both made numerous trips in prior seasons to Alaska but decided this year to forego the hassle of climbing aboard a small float plane to reach a more distant destination.

Sitka is located in the most southern part of Alaska, the part that adjoins Canada's Yukon area. The Wild Strawberry Lodge is located right near the waterfront in a city which has a population of less than ten thousand. After a two hour flight from Burbank and another two hour connection from Seattle it was pleasant to be met by a young lady sporting the Wild Strawberry sign. The whisk from there to the lodge in a convenient van took less than ten minutes. We had dinner at a downtown hotel – I only mention this because the same van taxied us there – to and from!

The next morning we were issued the usual foul weather gear and after breakfast vanned off to get on the "Jackpot" for the first day of fishing. The scenery, on the way to the fishing grounds, was, for this city dweller, fantastic. Many islands, I believe they are called the Baranoffs, with rocky beaches greeted the six of us on the boat. The Tongass pine forests unspoiled and dotted with areas of remaining snow at the higher levels.

Snow on them hills

The Tongass Forest

As we approached the ocean itself things got a bit rougher and Captain Mike cautioned us to "hang on". The ride took about an hour dock to fishing area. We did not record every stop or area that the skipper tried but somehow achieved our daily limits. The first priority of course was the king salmon with the halibut catch a close second. Also on the "menu" were black bass, a bottom species and the occasional ling cod. The coho salmon were sparse. Dave also hooked up with a beautiful – and rare – yelloweye. Occasional signs of humpback whales occurred.

All tackle was, of course, furnished. Reels were all equipped with depth counters and when the captain hollered "I see signs of fish at 75 feet" that's where you fished. The light rods were filled with 30 lb. line and 3-ft. leader. The leader was preceded by a lead weight and usually a double hooked sardine did the trick. Heavier gear was provided when halibut fishing with left-over fish guts being the bait for the bottom species. "Go to the bottom and crank up about six turns" was the order of the day.

batting you about and mostly having to brace yourself. Three layers of your favorite underwear made things more palatable. Hopefully some of pictures taken will convey the conditions.

Our report on the services rendered, the accommodations, the crew and staff can only be quoted as excellent. If the weather did not cooperate all the time, if a delayed flight caused a missed connection and a horrible day of rescheduling coming home, that could not be helped. When we saw the four large boxes of filets arriving on the conveyor belts all attitudes turned rosy!

I believe in Ghosts!

By Allen Brodetsky

Got very lucky and had the privilege to schedule a last minute (literally the night of) fishing trip with the legendary Trophy White Seabass Whisperers Captain Brandon Hayward and Captain James Lega of One Man Charters. Not only have I never caught a White Seabass, the only one I had ever seen was swimming around in the Long Beach Aquarium.

Captain James made the schlep from O-Side to save me driving and boat travel time. What a mensch! I was instructed to meet Captain James on "The Red Boat" at Los Alamitos Bay 10 pm sharp. We departed at 10:05 pm to our area of operation. Captain Brandon Hayward was already there in the Parker with another group. We anchored up, set up tackle and proceeded to soak some lines. I enjoyed a nice nap in the oversized kill bag that would later be overflowing with goodness. You would be surprised how warm a kill bag will keep you through the night :)

Right about grey light thirty, Captain James said we have wind from the south (rare) and the current is coming from the west. Not the most ideal conditions.... but guess what? Shortly after finishing his sentence, boooooom we get hit on one of our squid setups. I rush to the bow, grab the rod and proceed to horse in a 40 something pound White Seabass that is making me run circles around the center console like a chicken with my head cutoff. No time for rest. As soon as Captain James sinks a gaff into our first fish, another rod goes bendo off the starboard side. I lunged across the stern and grab the second rod. In the meantime, Captain James is trying to make sense of a deck with a 50+ inch sea monster aboard. His instructions "Whatever it takes Allen! jump, dip and dodge. That fish is coming home with us!". With those words of encouragement, I catch my second wind and bring another 40+ pounder to have breakfast with us. After overcoming shock, extreme heart palpitations and pinching myself to prove this was actually happening, a bait ball of anchovies with barracuda and mackerel pushing it up pulls up right beside our boat and uses the boat for cover. It was a picture straight out of National Geographic Channel. I am about to cast my squid in the water when a brown murky shadow appears from the depths no more than 10 ft. from the boat. I can't believe my eyes. Another Giant White Seabass!! I pitch the squid within 5 ft. of the fish. She takes a sniff and turns the other direction. 2 seconds later she turns around and inhales the squid as Captain James and I watch in amazement. I close the bail, aim for the stars and yell "FISH ON"! The elusive beast peels of drag setup at 30 lbs. as if the reel was in free spool. She takes me in to the kelp. No worries. I can feel the spectra turning the kelp in to Nori salad. We continued to play tug of war for another 5-10 minutes and then the unthinkable happens. Captain James brings aboard my first and personal best 52 lb. Giant White Seabass. Limits within 30 minutes is what Captain James and I called it :) The look on my face says it all. We ended up catching 1 more for a total of 4. Captain James made light work of the fourth fish over 40 lb. since I had already caught my limit. He was also nice enough to let me include his Seabass in my picture.

This was a fishing experience that will most likely never repeat itself. My hats off to Captain Brandon Hayward, Captain James Lega and One Man Charters for crushing their motto which is "We specialize in catching once in a lifetime trophy fish". I will be fishing with One Man Charters for many many years to come!

Alaskan Adventures

By Sophia Huynh

Let's start by saying I love Sitka, Alaska and haven't been in 3 years. The last couple of times, my friend Dawn has joined me on the trips. Dawn's husband, Shea, told her she couldn't go back unless he went too! We thought he was joking, but realized after 2 years that he was serious. So we started planning our 2017 trip that included bringing Shea and Kevin! The past trips have been with Kingfisher Charters & Lodge and we made friends with some great captains over the years. One of my favorite captains, Aaron Bean, went out on his own and started his charter company called Pacific Parallax. I booked a 4-day trip with Aaron for the four of us fishing June 20, 21, 22, 23 and flying out the 24th. We decided to fly in a couple days earlier so Kevin could check out the town and explore this quaint "little drinking town with a big fishing problem."

We flew in on a Saturday and Aaron picked us up in the van and we headed to the market to get drinks and other necessities and to get our fishing licenses. We then headed to the Blueberry Inn to get situated in our condo for the next week. It's a very comfortable condo with 2 bedrooms each room has their own shower & bathroom and 2 twin beds. Kevin and Shea are both super tall (6'5" and 6'3" respectively) and made do with the twin beds while Dawn and I (5' and 5'1" respectively) were sleeping in luxury. There is a full kitchen, living room, laundry room and a closet filled with Guy Cotton foul weather gear and Xtratuf ankle boots. Melissa, Aaron's wife, emailed me a few weeks before the trip for a list of breakfast foods items that would be in the fridge when we arrived!! Super awesome!!! The rest of the day was hanging out, chatting and having drinks. Sunday was Father's Day and we convinced Aaron and Melissa to join us on a boat and atv excursion to Kruzof Island with Sitka Alaska Outfitters (they also offer flyfishing trips). The weather was spectacular clear blue skies and warm!! We had a great time driving around the island on our side-by-side vehicles and we saw Bears!!!! We saw a mom with her 2 cubs playing in the river and another big bear just eating and hanging out. Later we saw a mom with her cub. They are just so cute, from a couple hundred yards vantage point!

Monday we decided to go on a hike up the Harbor mtn/ Gavin Hill trail. We drove 2 miles and gained 2000 ft of elevation to get to the trailhead. Oh one little minor detail, the weather did a 180 on us!

Pouring rain and the further we drove up the more soaked in we were. We had to go though; we were on vacation and can't waste the day! So we started hiking and it was drizzling, not too bad. Then it started raining and it got cold. We decided to get to the one-mile mark and turn around. Two miles is commendable, ha ha ha!! It was beautiful though, all the different moss growing and just lush!! The whole time we kept thinking how this is totally bear country and we had no gun or bear spray. So we just talked really loud and kept walking. It was fun and we were happy we went.

Tuesday was the first day of fishing the weather was rough but we got our kings, a couple coho and some halibut. As the week went on the weather improved by the last day it was greasy flat and warm! Every day we got our limit of kings (1 per person per day, 3 annual). The coho fishing was the best I've had up there for this time of year! For the trip we got 42 coho, limit is 6 per person per day. Some were huge!!! It was super fun!! On the last day we caught 20 coho just 4 short for the day limits. Kevin was jigging while we trolled for salmon and caught a sockeye salmon!! It was very exciting!

After we got our salmon, we headed to deeper water for halibut, lingcod, and yelloweye. The regulations for halibut are 1 per person per day, under 44" and over 80". So we weeded through the catches to get our keepers! Dawn was the halibut queen; most of hers were nice sized keepers. Kevin was fishing a jig and hooked in to a nice 80lb (estimated) halibut! Instead of fishing it the rod holder Kevin used So Cal rail style to bring the halibut in. We took some photos and video of it at the surface and released it to grow bigger. Shea was bit and while he was reeling it up my line got slack so I started reeling. I brought it up on my side and it was a good-sized halibut that had bit my jig on the way up! Greedy lil sucker! We sent it on its way since it wasn't in the slot. The lingcod has a similar reverse slot limit of 1 per person per day 2 annual, 30-35" or over 55" to keep. This style of size regulation was fun! We had to keep fishing and release what wasn't legal and hope for a legal one! We got lucky with 4 legal lingcod for the trip. We released many in the 35"-55" range. They were monsters!!! We had some on the jig, baited hook, and a couple of hitchhikers.

All the fish were bled and placed in the hold. When we got back to the dock, a representative from Salmon Shares picked up the totes for processing. Everything was evenly split between the four of us. All the fish was vacuum-sealed, frozen and labeled. We tried to calculate how much fish we would be going home with and figured at least a 50lb box each or possibly 2 boxes. We were pleasantly surprised when we saw 8 fish boxes with our names written on them at the airport!! It was a very productive trip and if I can't go back for another 3 years, at least I can ration my fish to make it last.

It was a great and memorable trip. I was so excited to show Kevin around Sitka and have him experience different fishing methods. He said he enjoyed it and is planning what gear to bring with us next time we go! I think he's sold!!

SPICY TUNA FOR A STARTER

By Donald Goldsobel

Whenever I process a tuna for the freezer, I have the ends of the tail section that is full of white stringy ligaments. Using them raw is unadvisable. Those white things are like dental floss. I use those pieces to make spicy tuna. No waste except the white stringy stuff.

This method is easy, the spicy part is very variable depending on taste, so this is a guide to the way I make it for my not so spice loving friends.

The tuna: With the edge of a knife, scrape toward the tip of the tail, pressing to remove the meat. Repeat until all you have left is the white stringy stuff. Discard it. When you have enough for your needs, chill it while you make the spicy mix.

Use about a half-cup of mayo, more or less. A teaspoon of lemon juice... I used mild Meyer lemons as I have them growing in the yard. A teaspoon of roasted sesame oil and a half-teaspoon of chili paste, like Sriracha. Mix, taste, and adjust.

An alternative is to add small dice of tuna or yellowtail to accentuate the tuna taste and make the texture more toothsome. I imagine this would be great made with a rich salmon like Atlantic or Sockeye. Season it with Furakake?

I add half to the tuna and serve the remainder on the side.

To serve: I like it with room temperature sushi rice. Lots of recipes for it on the web. Basically it is short grain rice cooked firm, cooled and seasoned with rice vinegar, salt and sugar.

I usually serve it on thin slices of Persian or hothouse cucumber. With the mayo, additional hot sauce, a beer or cabernet sauvignon. If you find a favorite way to do it...share it here on Calling All Cooks.

Here is a golden oldie from 2003 on the Bongos. Barry Cohn with a 220 lb pound Mako caught off of Catalina!

Jim Carlisle and Jeff Chuang with their incredible April Catalina Island white sea bass. They went fishing with Brandon Hayward of Bight Sportfishing (formally One Man Charters)! A late afternoon fish for Jim and a late night jig fish for Jeff. Love the purple on the nighttime shot!

These are from a June seabass trip that Jeff Chuang and Jim Carlisle made with Brandon Hayward that resulted in an early morning bite for 4 fish into the high 50s. Jeff and Jim along with a pic of a happy Captain Brandon with 2 of the larger models. Good times!!
