President's Message by Paul Varenchik

Fishing is steamrolling along now at a banner pace. Last year's record albacore season promises to be eclipsed. The five-day Qualifier 105 trip, in terms of quantity and quality, should go down as one of the greatest club charters ever. Whether you have already cashed in on the epic fishing, or have a trip planned for the near future, get out on the water and enjoy some of the best fishing in the world, right here in our back yard.

Good luck, good fishing....be safe and keep only what you are going to eat! ■

Now that's a Real Sportfisherman!

Jerry Wells Sr. of Murietta broke his own IGFA records at the Rockpile south of the Coronado Islands. The record on 2-lb. test was a 15-lb yellowtail. His new world record was recognized at 16 lbs., 3 oz. also on 2-lb test.

Fish & Game Commission Relaxes Rules Re: 120-ft Restriction.

Anglers may now fish in depths up to 180 ft. This should offer more opportunities. The decision was ok'd by the PFMC and was due to a reassessment of stocks—primarily bocaccio!

William Boyce Headliner for the September 29th Dinner Meeting

Dynamic is the word for this biologist, photographer, sales dynamo, world traveler and conservationist.

His love of travel and adventure led this Southern Californian to pursue a career in fisheries. Known mainly for his underwater photographic skills while an observer on tuna boats, Bill has joined Michael Fowlkes in his prize-winning TV show. After 16 years as a biologist he was part of many filming expeditions to Africa, Azores, and other international venues. Bill has also owned and operated Boyce Custom Rods & Tackle since 1983 and keeps busy with many tournaments and trade shows. He can be reached at

Dedicated to Fishing, Fun, Relaxation, and Companionship!

Chum Line received these two stories by club members. Different trips taken by a number of LARRC members on the Polaris Supreme. Sorry we ran out of space last month!

A Rough Start to a Great Finish

by Eli Livnat

The long anticipation was over and replaced by excitement. On Saturday, August 16th, our group of 18 anglers departed the landing on board the Polaris Supreme. The LARRC contingent consisted of Mike Baar, Dean Hendrickson, Miro Hussenjian, Al Scow, Sam Rubinfeld Julian Wolf, Eli Livnat and Chartermaster Eric Rogger and nephew Alex rounded out the group. As we arrived at the bait receivers we learned the bait quality was poor due to an algae bloom and unusually high water temperatures in the bay. With spirits still high we traveled south into the winds which blew 25-30 knots at times and sent nasty swells crashing over the wheelhouse. Needless to say, it made the ride and the fishing quite uncomfortable. Sunday morning the trolling jigs went into the water in search of albacore. The fishing was scratchy. We only picked up 3-5 fish per stop averaging 15-20 lbs. Based on reports from other boats, Captain Tommy decided to head northwest to more productive waters. On Monday morning the wind subsided a bit and fishing conditions looked better. We had spent the night on the sea anchor and stayed on it all day thanks to the cooperation of schools of albacore and bluefin tuna. We caught fat albacore up to 35 lbs. and a very nice grade of bluefin ranging from 20-45 lbs. Our prayers to the Sea Goddess were answered and the seas remained calm for the rest of the trip. We also lucked out with the bait situation as the captain of the Qualifier 105 gave us a beautiful load of frisky sardines. Tuesday and Wednesday were packed with constant action provided by hungry bluefin and albacore. Captain

As Good as it Gets 5 Days on the Polaris Supreme

by Larry Brown

Jack Nicholson and Helen Hunt weren't there but fishing on the Polaris Supreme 5-day trip returning June 26 was

Rough Start—Happy Ending with Alex Rogger.

Tommy located the schools by sonar and visually locating breezers. They were anxious to bite. As we drifted with the school, the ticket to catching the larger fish was to use a live sardine under a helium filled balloon. This technique proved successful for jackpot winner Dietmar Kruger, who got a 74-lb. bluefin. Final fish count: 237 albacore, 196 bluefin tuna, 2 dorado, 2 yellowtail and one yellowfin tuna. Although the start of the trip was slow it ended with a bang and turned out to be a great experience. ■

“As Good As It Gets”. Tommy Rothery and his expert crew deserve Oscars for their performance. LARRC members Will Ebersman, Hon. Member Tom Raftican, Philip Friedman, with his two sons Phillip Jr. and Patrick and Larry Brown joined the 976 Tuna Charter for epic albacore & yellowtail fishing.

The first day we targeted albacore and caught just shy of our limits of big, fat fish.

Only one bluefin hit the deck and kept being enjoyed as sushi and sashimi. The next day we arrived at Chesters Rocks near the Baja Coast and experienced an immediate slamming of yellowtail anxious to bite sardines as well as iron. By the end of the second day many anglers had limits of albacore and yellowtail. Next day was spent looking for the elusive bluefin but it was still a fun day with most of us releasing fish, filling out our limits and watching a huge whale migration.

Again Captain Tommy was faced with a tough decision, keep hunting for bluefin in relatively rough seas or stop by one of his favorite honey holes for some tasty bottom critters. In four hours we bagged our limits of big reds and a few dozen lingcod.

My highlight observations: The future of fishing was on board with six kids 8-13 years.

These kids displayed maturity, respect and angling skill above their age. I certainly hope there will be clean oceans, abundant fisheries for these kids and in turn for their kids. I urge everyone to participate in some way in the various efforts to save the fishery future.

Also on my radar screen—the cuisine of 5-star Chef Javier. Exquisitely prepared pork loin, NY steak and lobster, etc. Unbelievable! ■

Thunnus Thynnus —Bluefin Tuna

Some of us have been blessed this season with fine catches of the transpacific bluefin. Prized for their firm pink meat bluefin giants may sell for $35-$80,000. Dr. Milton Love reports that they spawn from the Phillipines and Japan eastward. Their arrival on our west coast is part of a long cycle arriving off Baja in late spring. The larger fish don't visit us very often—in 1989 schools of bluefin up to a 1000 lbs. came up to the Channel Islands and were pretty well wiped out.

Pacific bluefin can reach a length of up to 6.5 ft. and a 3-year-old measures up to 3ft.

Atlantic bluefin are said to achieve larger sizes but their species has been decimated over the '70s with some estimates declaring that their number is down to 25,000 animals. Severe restrictions have been imposed.

Plank boats are one of the ways to catch the larger fish. Often equipped with electrically charged harpoons they stun the fish so as to preserve the quality of its meat. This prevents a lactic build-up in the muscles which affects taste. Fat content, fat distribution, feel and color are all part of what the buyers look for.

Bluefin are also known as the "jumping tuna" since they may launch themselves completely out of the water in pursuit of their prey. Anchovies, sardines, sauries, squid, as well as pelagic crabs, fit into their diet while off our coast. They are finicky eaters where hooked bait is concerned but are most likely to bite when swimming with albacore.

Dr. Love reports they can swim normally at 50 to 150 miles per day and can reach speeds of about 50 miles per hr. The IGFA lists a 1496-lb blue caught off Nova Scotia in 1979.

Even though electronics help to locate the fish, finding temperature breaks and a sharp lookout from the crows nest aid in finding breezing schools. A sharp captain will issue the order to throw bait, hard,

HOOKED ON CIRCLES?

When Washington State, in the 1980's, decided to require all salmon anglers to use barbless hooks, an uproar ensued. When things settled down most fishermen figured out that their catch rates hardly declined, but that releasing undersized or out-of-season salmon became much quicker and easier—on them as well as salmon. Today, California also requires that anglers mooching bait for salmon use barbless circle hooks. Costa Rico has made the use of circles mandatory when soaking bait for billfish.

(SportFishing ) ■

hopefully enticing his meter marks to come to the surface. All eyes are watching for boils at which time anglers cast their lines. What an exciting time! Good luck fishing and keep only what you can eat. The ratio for trade-in of whole fish to a 6.5 oz can of tuna is 8 lbs. Let a few of your conquests live another day! ■

LARRC's First Annual Picnic

On Sunday, July 7th, the LARRC had it's first Family Beach Party. The event took place at Sycamore Campground, north of Malibu, on Pacific Coast Highway, just north of the Deep Hole. Since most LARRC events don't see a lot of participation on the part of wives this was a pleasant change. Lots of wives and lots of children.

The weather was sunny, the fishing was limited to a couple of barred perch and the BBQ lunch was excellent. The casting contest saw much participation and became very competitive. The sand crab contest, another participatory sport, by LARRC members and families, was a little slow. One little girl came up with a green tree frog which made her day. The board will, no doubt, grant a trophy for frogs in the future.

All in all, close to one hundred people enjoyed a relaxing day at the beach. Hopefully we can do it again next year. Thanks, Paul Varenchik. ■

Celebrating the Fourth of July... A spectacular display

by Gladys MacNair

Armed with sundry rods and an icebox full of picnic goodies, a group of LARRC members boarded a 50' fishing boat chartered by intrepid President Paul Varenchik and First Lady Francine. Moving out beyond the breakwater at Marina Del Rey on a beautiful July 4 afternoon, the anglers were soon busily catching (and releasing) sandbass. The jackpot catch of the day, however, was Steve Simon's baracuda.

As night fell, the boat anchored a bit further out, and the anglers gradually put up their rods. Royal and I had thought we would eventually get in a bit closer in order to watch the fireworks display from the barge at the Marina. But as the Marina fireworks began their display, as Paul pointed out, it became apparent that we were in a perfect spot to view fireworks from every venue along the whole southern coast, from Redondo Beach up to Paradise Cove. Until all displays had finally concluded with their separate grand finales, we were treated to a spectacular show of beautiful fireworks, at just about anywhere we looked.

Royal MacNair and his eight-pound striper at Lake Castaic.

Everyone had a great afternoon and evening, and probably one of the most unique experiences ever to celebrate the founding of our nation! ■

He Who Laughs Last, Laughs Best!

When Royal MacNair won an ultra light rod at the LARRC awards dinner/auction in February the event was greeted with much laughter. Royal says he thought to himself, "I better catch something on this outfit, if nothing more than to prove it isn't just a novelty item". The rod sat in his rack for about three months, until July 2nd when Royal went to Lake Castaic with Bob Sands' and Kurt Valles. After re-spooling his "winning" rod with 4# test line, he took it along. Surprisingly, he managed to catch 5 stripers weighing up to 8#, releasing 3 and keeping 2, and came home with some nice filets of striped bass. The heaviest hook-up nearly bent the little rod double, but it survived and proved it was the "ultra, ultra rod that could!". Having the last laugh is o.k. says Royal. ■

Fishing License Fees are Going Up

The cost of fishing appears to be going up. The department of Fish & Game has proposed a series of increases likely to become law on January 1st. One will boost the base cost of a one-day license by $2, from $6.25 to $8.25. That's better than what the DFG had originally proposed: the outright elimination of one-day licenses.

Additionally, ocean-only licenses, which this year sell for $17.25 will be eliminated. And the cost for the mandatory ocean enhancement stamp will increase from $2.50 to $3.50. So, saltwater and freshwater anglers will have to buy a general license at a cost of $31.25 (up from the current price of $29.25). And ocean anglers can add to that the cost of the enhancement stamp.

When Necessity Makes Strange Bedfellows –

Most of us consider commercial fishermen our nemesis. Who hasn't been on the water when a large seiner made an ominous appearance complete with spotter plane. We've always been resentful of the commercials for being wasteful and fishing our turf. Thoughtful people will understand the need for "getting in bed " with a group of commercials when it comes to the Channel Islands issues.

The Ventura County Commercial Fishermen's Association, happens to be on the same page with us recreationals when it comes to fighting the Channel Islands Marine Protected Areas. The suit filed by a San Francisco attorney to turn back the Fish & Game Commission ruling was bound to be expensive. Indeed the appeal to get a TRO—Temporary Restraining Order—was turned down by Ventura County Judge Hintz as was an appeal to have this reversed. (May 13, 2003) The law suit is proceeding and is scheduled to resume this September,

It appears that the California Fish & Game Commission intends to expand on these reserves as have certain federal agencies now involved in the process. Recreational Anglers must be supportive of winning this suit if they wish to continue their fishing activities in future years. The suit is critical of the ways in which the reserves were created. Certain recreational fishing organizations have already made contributions in order to help overturn the commission's decision.
